TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

This is to confirm that Daniel Thornton worked as Assistant Production Manager on the CBS TV miniseries "The Dovekeepers".

Our 4-hour show consisted of shooting three hours of actual screen time in a challenging five week schedule, during a time in Malta when other productions had exhausted all other crew on the island. This shortage issue and the absence of a local/Maltese production manager made Daniel's role in assisting myself and the UPM all the more important. He became an integral part of the management team and I am very grateful that he managed to free himself from his previous full-time work outside the industry to return to the film business.

At all times Daniel conducted his works diligently and in a responsible manner. He was able to carry out tasks without regular supervision and he applied common sense at all times, taking initiative at the proper moments. He proved himself to be very resourceful and never shied away from new tasks, whether it was sourcing pigeons from Europe and making deals with local animal handlers to sourcing and penciling crew dailies without a final schedule. He was notably always honest, polite and courteous in his dealings with everyone, even during moments of high stress.

This is not the first time I engaged Daniel on a production and he has always possessed very good coordination and communication skills. During Dovekeepers I noticed he has matured and I have no doubt he will keep doing so. I therefore have no hesitation in recommending him to any other production.
